Designed for use in small- to medium-sized venues, the Mackie SRM-FLEX is a portable column array PA system that can easily be transported, configured, and operated by just one person. It breaks down into four sections and comes with a carry bag and a dust cover to make moving from gig to gig simple. The SRM-FLEX is a two-way 1300W sound system consisting of one 10" woofer, six 2" high-frequency drivers, and an onboard 6-channel digital mixer.

The digital mixer features a control-per-function design, 2-band EQ on channels 1 and 2, three application-specific voicing modes, and three choices of reverb. Mic, line, instrument, and aux inputs ensure that you can connect common sources for all sorts of gigs. The SRM-FLEX's built-in Bluetooth capabilities enable you to not only stream music from a mobile device, but also wirelessly mix via a user-friendly app on your iOS or Android mobile device.

Six 2" high-frequency drivers in a wide-dispersion array along with the 10" subwoofer provide room-filling sound for audiences of up to 100 people
Amplification power of 1300W peak
Integrated Bluetooth functionality for wireless music streaming and app control from any iOS or Android device
Physical mix controls are redundant to the app for seamless switching between mixing on the SRM-Flex or anywhere in the venue
