The Heil Sound PR 22 SUT is a handheld cardioid dynamic microphone designed for articulate reproduction of vocals, speech, instruments, amplifier cabinets, and drums in studios, clubs, houses of worship, and live stage applications. Though sonically identical to the PR 22, the PR 22 SUT sports a stainless steel grille in place of the PR 22's interchangeable silver, black, and gold grilles. The dynamic microphone element features a composite magnet for increased strength and a cardioid polar pattern, which provides significant rear rejection and immunity to feedback. With a 145 dB maximum SPL and a frequency response of 50 Hz to 18 kHz, it is well suited to a wide variety of sources.

The patent-pending ISO BAND isolation mounting impedes handling noise and rumble from vibrations. Plosives and wind noise are attenuated via the included foam windscreen. An on/off switch allows easy muting between announcements, bands, or sets. The balanced XLR 3-pin output ensures compatibility with most microphone preamps, mixer inputs, portable PA systems, and audio interfaces. A mic clip and carrying bag are also included with the PR 20 SUT.

A combination of special porting and phasing plug design yield a cardioid polar pattern that exhibits -30 dB of rear rejection at the 180° off-axis point
Large-diaphragm, patent-pending ISO BAND isolation mounting offers increased articulation and reduced handling noise
Large, low-mass, 1.125" aluminum voice coil assembly
High 145 dB maximum SPL easily handles loud sound sources such as snare hits or trumpet blasts
Convenient on/off switch allows easy muting between bands or sets
Supplied windscreen reduces plosives, wind noise, and moisture exposure
Hand-assembled and tested in the United States of America
